'WOMEN FOR WILDLIFE'

History of the African Elephant

Africa is the cradle of mankind and the home of the African Elephant. The first remains of the African Elephant were identified as far back as 4 million years ago.

These gentle giants, who have survived through the ages, now face a real danger of eventual extinction with less than half a million left in Africa. The only other surviving wild elephants are found in Asia, which are an entirely different species.

Elephants were the ORIGINAL communicators in Africa, opening up pathways through the bush and over mountains for man to follow, thus uniting the continent. Hence, the elephant symbolises AFRICAN UNITY. The Elephant is also the strongest and largest animal in the world, the King of all animals and therefore the symbol of POWER. The Elephant has a powerful sense “of family” and members of the herd are connected by strong bonds, making them symbolic of FAMILY UNITY.

100,000 ELEPHANTS KILLED BY POACHERS IN JUST THREE YEARS Central Africa has lost 64 percent of its elephants in a decade.

Every 15 minutes an elephant is killed for its ivory in East Africa. That’s a staggering 30-thousand elephants a year.

We’ve reached the tipping point where more elephants are being killed than are being born. We’re on a downward spiral to the extinction of one of the most iconic creatures on our planet.

Big Business has Big Consequences

The illegal trade in wildlife is worth an estimated $19-billion a year, putting it in the same league as the drugs, arms and human trafficking trades. It’s the fastest growing illegal trade globally.

Big Weapons and Big Profits

The most common poaching gun in East Africa is the AK-47. According to gun policy officials the going rate for a gun in Kenya is around 100 -130 US$. The money that can be made from just one elephant tusk is up to 240 US$.

The sale of illegal wildlife products, specifically ivory in East Africa, is known to be funding terrorism and the illicit drug trade. The consequences of ivory trafficking is extraordinary with the entire region affected, from political destabilisation to a rapid decline in biodiversity.

There’s also the human cost: every year sees an increase in the number of game rangers killed in the line of duty trying to protect the animals. Of course, the hideously cruel manner in which these animals are slaughtered cannot be ignored. Even the largest land mammal on earth is no match for an AK-47 or poison.

So, who's buying this ivory and why?

In China a tusk sells for more than 2500 US$ - its value therefor increasing tenfold by the time it is shipped out of Africa and it arrives in Asia. Carvings from ivory are status symbols, both decorative and religious in certain Asian countries, most notably China, Thailand and Vietnam. Interestingly, after China, the biggest market for ivory products is the United States.

There's been a huge lack of education amongst consumers in the Asian markets as to where ivory comes from.

Recent studies revealed that only less than a third of consumers were aware elephants had to be killed to harvest ivory. A further 70% believed that tusks grow back like fingernails or that the tusks "fall out" naturally.

But whatever the end-user reasons for using ivory, the bottom line is that it's huge business for large criminal syndicates. Add government corruption, failing legal systems, porous borders and less-than-scrupulous customs practices and you've got the perfect recipe for a thriving illegal trade in ivory.

Did you know...
Of the 157 poaching related cases detected in Kenya in the past three years, less than 5% have been prosecuted and only 3 of those convicted and sent to jail.

The tragedy of "Blood Ivory"

Honorary Kenyan Wildlife Service Ranger, Raabia Hawa at the discovery of yet another tragic and violent death at the hands of poachers.

The "hotspots" in Africa where elephants are being severely targeted.

More than 60% of the carcasses surveyed across the continent in 2014 died at the hands of poachers. According to Cites, anything more than 50% sends elephant numbers into decline.

WHY THE ELEPHANT IGNITE EXPEDITION?

The ELEPHANT IGNITE Expedition strives to promote a greater awareness for nature conservation and the impoverished communities in rural Africa.

During the trip we aim to embrace: the unity of communities and nature working together, experience the power of individuals and animals, and the close bonds upheld in a family unit.

The ELEPHANT IGNITE expedition will see a group of passionate women, from all walks of life, travel a distance of over 10 000kms through 10 Southern African countries, Our expedition members will get the opportunity to connect with current conservation, political and tribal leaders in various countries and foster knowledge-sharing between generations and nationalities.

We will be visiting extraordinary people doing incredible research and anti-poaching work on the ground. By linking them together we expand their support base and ongoing funding through increased awareness.

Connected by a common goal to make a difference to Africa's elephants, the group will embark on a journey with a purpose.

AIMS AND OBJECTIVES

- To increase public awareness for the current spiralling wildlife crisis that is occurring with elephants in East Africa and surrounding countries.
- To help reduce human - elephant conflict challenges through education and awareness programmes.
- To visit rural communities along the way with educational messages about poaching and wildlife crime issues, with special emphasis on youth engagement. Educational tools include an elephant information booklet with fun facts, a few games and fables from each country visited with a wildlife warrior certificate. These training aids will empower individuals to share their knowledge with others to support ongoing momentum for the campaign.
- To nurture an understanding of the values of conservation amongst rural communities, particularly for elephant and other endangered species affected by illegal poaching and wildlife crime.
- Gain youth perspectives on poaching, wildlife crime, demand-reduction, and the economic value of endangered species.
- To visit the various conservation organisations that are fighting to keep our wildlife safe, and meet the "heroes" on the ground.
- To link these conservation organisations and initiatives throughout the region and encourage them to share their knowledge, thereby strengthening networking capabilities and increasing fundraising opportunities.
- To deliver funds raised and donated/sponsored equipment etc. to the various nominated charities and conservation organisations. (Fundraising activities will take place pre-expedition in order to be able to do this. We'd also like to show donors exactly where their money is going.)
- To gather conservation and anti-poaching messages from children and adults who we have interacted with along the route as a further call to action against elephant poaching. The objective is to present these messages to the head of CITIES.

Weaving an invisible web, linking together the various conservation projects, communities and individuals whilst sharing their amazing stories with the world.

WHY IS THIS TRULY UNIQUE VENTURE?

The expedition is not just focussed on one aspect of conservation. Organisations targeted for visits have contributed in a number of diverse ways to alleviating human-elephant conflict and protecting the species.

The individuals on the ground are just “normal” individuals like you and I who have a passion for Africa and decided to make a difference. The rapport with the public is increased because of the “realness” of the people and their unique journeys that brought them to where they are today.

The dynamic of combining conservation messages, youth education and community upliftment with a comprehensive communications strategy to gain traction for public awareness and support.

LEGEND

Elephant Project or Conservation Site Visit

Funds / Goods Donations

Social Responsibility Schools / Community Education

The expedition route has been carefully mapped out to allow us to conduct site visits with various elephant conservationists and environmentalists who have dedicated their lives to protecting and studying the African Elephant.

We will deliver sponsored goods to support their programmes and conduct video interviews for broadcasting their stories to the rest of the world. The additional press coverage will provide assistance in gaining further exposure for their programmes.

A young elephant is shown from the side, leaning over a watering hole. Its trunk is submerged in the water, and its head is lowered towards the water's surface. The elephant's skin is a mottled grey-brown color, and its large ear is visible. The background is a blurred natural setting with trees and a clear sky.

ORGANISER

The Elephant Ignite expedition is spearheaded by Carla Geyser, founder and main trustee of The Blue Sky Society Trust.

The Blue Sky Society Trust is more than a non-profit organisation dedicated to helping people and animals in need; it's a way of living. Carla aims to connect like-minded people to share their ideas, passion and skills and in doing so create change where it's needed most.

Her vision is to identify and manage various conservation projects where people, who want to help, are encouraged to donate their time, expertise and ideas to recognized charities. "People don't always have large amounts of money to donate," says Carla, "but they've got skills or perhaps a few hours a week to help out – that's what it's all about".

Since its inception The Blue Sky Society Trust has contributed to a number of conservation projects:

- World Youth Rhino Summit
- ZAPP Wing - Sleeping bags for rangers
- Fundimvelo Thula Thula Rhino Orphanage - Construction of security towers, water tanks, trees in rhino boma's for shade, security doors, clinic fridge, medicines and other supplies. (Through BSS and associated contacts over 600K has been raised for the orphanage.)
- Sivikela Carniore Protection Project - Camera Traps

Carla is also an experienced African explorer and together with her planning team will work closely with other expedition leaders, the various elephant experts/groups and organisations to ensure meticulous planning and execution of this uniquely African experience.

The 'all women' expedition will consist of 4 'teams' – each with a maximum of 3 members. Each team member will be selected by the expedition leader and will be liable to contribute to their weekly costs.
